Willis' Energy Practice Adds Significant Strength to New York Team

New York, NY, November 6, 2006 – Willis Group Holdings, (NYSE:WSH), the global insurance broker, announced today that Willis' Energy Practice has recruited Frank D'Ambrosio and Jack Camillo, two well-known insurance practitioners, to its New York service team.

Frank D'Ambrosio began his career over 30 years ago as an energy underwriter with the All American Marine Slip in New York. His underwriting career spanned some 15 years with various insurers before he joined Marsh in 1991. As Senior Vice President and Offshore Property Manager, D'Ambrosio had client executive responsibilities for several large integrated oil companies, and brings to Willis a formidable reputation, both as a competitor and as a well-known pillar of the New York energy insurance community.

Jack Camillo is a highly respected casualty specialist. He has over 25 years experience with Marsh in New York where he managed the Marine and Energy Casualty Department for more than ten years. His key specialty has been the design and placement of high profile Excess Liability programs for major integrated energy companies that have posed particular challenges to the conventional casualty markets, as well as having deep knowledge of Primary Casualty programs.

Commenting on the new appointments, Peter Fritz, head of Energy at Willis' New York office said: "Willis' profile in the energy sector continues to grow. We are very proud that these talented and experienced individuals, with their unique range of skills and expertise, have chosen to join us. I have no doubt that they will significantly enhance our ability to add value on our clients' behalf."
