

John D. Fortin, FSA, MAAA
National Practice Leader
Healthcare Cost Management

John Fortin is the National Practice Leader, Healthcare Cost Management for Willis. With over 30 years of experience in employee benefits, John has extensive background in Health and Welfare plan strategy, design and implementation. He started his career as a group actuary before entering the consulting field.

John has worked with diverse organizations of virtually every type and size including a number of groups including the American Heart Association, Home Depot and the State of South Carolina. Over the last several years, he has specialized in middle market clients on Health & Productivity issues including wellness, disease management, pharmacy benefits, plan integration, and metrics related to these programs. As a result, many clients are impacting the health of their employees with significant cost savings in health claims, disability benefits, absenteeism and presenteeism.

John has earned the designation of Fellow in the Society of Actuaries and is a Member of the American Academy of Actuaries. He has a B. S. in Mathematics and Economics from Tufts University, a M. S in Actuarial Science from Northeastern University and has also attended the London School of Economics. John and is a frequent national speaker on Health Care Strategy and Health & Productivity.

