

What Employers Are Saying About Wellness and Disease Management - EMP100

Tuesday, 10:45 am - 12:15 pm

Although senior management is generally convinced wellness and disease management programs are necessary to control rising healthcare costs, many are unclear as to how to measure the return on investment and if employee lifestyles should be tied to contributions. This session focuses on the results of a Wellness and Disease Management Survey of more than 400 employers. Speakers will discuss survey findings, including the effectiveness, perception and satisfaction of these programs, recommendations from employers on how to improve program success and ways employers can measure return on investment.
